

Silk Finish Corduroy!

21 Inches Wide, 39c a Yard

By a very fortunate purchase we have secured five pieces of Silk Finish Corduroy to sell at about twenty-one cents a yard less than the usual price. It is 21 inches wide, having a beatifully bright and silk-like surface—almost as handsome as silk velvet. Makes a rich-looking dress fabric and especially desirable for children's wear. Colors are white, navy blue, myrtle, dark brown and garnet.

Price Only 39c a Yard

It is therefore necessary that Vermonters who desire to witness the ceremony send their names immediately to Gen. W. H. Gilmore, at Fairlee, Vt.

AN OPTICAL DELUSION.

The Story of a Captain and a Sword.

The colonel, a right martinet, is sitting at the window of his room when, looking out, he sees a captain crossing the barrack yard toward the gate. Looking at him closely, he is shocked to observe that the rules and regulations to the contrary notwithstanding, the captain does not carry a sword.

"Captain!" he calls from the window. "Hil, captain, step up to my room for a moment, will you?"

The captain obeys promptly, borrows a sword of the officer of the guard, the guardroom being at the foot of the stairs, and presents himself to the colonel in irreproachable dress.

The colonel is somewhat surprised to see the sword in its place and, having to invent some pretext for calling his subordinate back, says, with some confusion: "Beg your pardon, captain, but really I've forgotten what it was I wanted to speak to you about. However, it can't have been very important. I'll keep. Good morning."

The captain salutes, departs, returns the sword to its owner and is making off across the barrack yard, where he again comes within range of the colonel's vision.

The colonel rubs his eyes, stares, says softly to himself: "How in thunder is this? He hasn't a sword to his waist!" then calls aloud: "Captain! Ho, captain! One moment, please!"

The captain returns, borrows the sword again, mounts the stairs and enters the colonel's presence. His commanding officer stares at him intently. He has a sword; he sees it; he hears it clank.

"Captain," he stammers, growing very hot, "it's ridiculous, you know, but—ha! ha!—I'd just remembered what I wanted to say to you, and now—ha! ha!—it's gone out of my head again! Funny, isn't it? Ha, ha, ha! Losing my memory. Never mind, I'll think of it and write you. Good morning."

The captain salutes, departs, returns the sword to its owner and makes for the gate. As he crosses the barrack yard the colonel calls his wife to his side and says: "See that officer out there?"

"Yes."

"Has he got a sword on?"

The colonel's wife adjusts her eyeglass upon him, scans him keenly and says: "He hasn't a taste of a sword."

The colonel: "That's just where you fool yourself. Yes, he has"—London Graphic.

The Word "Ale."

What could be more English than the word ale? It carries us back to the banquets of our dead ancestors in Wal-halla, and some of its compounds open up vistas into that old England which is fast disappearing, becoming a tale that is told, obsolete itself. Such are alebush, a tavern sign; ale conner, "an officer appointed in every court leet and sworn to look to the assize and goodness of bread, ale and beer." Ale-cost, the name of a kind of tansy used to flavor the rustic's home brewed, has a good old English look. Yet it bears witness to the mongrel nature of the speech of this mongrel nation, cost being from the Greek hostos, a savory herb of species unidentified. Alegar is sager or sour ale, used as vinegar.—Cornhill Magazine.
